

BIBLICAL INTERPRETATION IN ISLAMIC CONTEXTS

Conference: 1-3 September 2015

The first 'Biblical Interpretation in Islamic Contexts' conference launches the new 'Routledge Biblical Interpretation in Islamic Contexts' series. It is hoped that the first two volumes will be published before the conference, and that the conference will gather and resource prospective contributors to the series.

CALL FOR PAPERS

We invite proposals for papers that use distinct and explicit methodological approaches to particular biblical books and themes in Islamic context. The focus should be on biblical interpretation. Examples might include, but are not limited to:-

- A historical study of the reception of a biblical book in Islamic contexts.
- A reading of a biblical character in conversation with Islamic stories about that character.
- A reading of a biblical book using qur'anic material as a hermeneutical key.
- Interpretation of a biblical theme in conversation with parallel themes in Islamic culture.
- An intertextual study of the Bible and the Qur'an that focuses on the implications of the study for biblical interpretation.
- A Muslim reading of a biblical book.

Abstracts should be sent to research@cmcsoxford.org.uk by December 31st 2014
